

We see risk differently

Deal One

Revolving facility to unlock working capital on the client's terms

Traditional stocking finance had become restrictive for a growing used car business looking to scale. Rather than forcing the client into a rigid structure, we created a revolving facility that could be drawn down as stock opportunities arose. By replacing limitations with flexibility, we unlocked working capital on the client's terms. A strong example of how revolving facilities are becoming a well-considered alternative to traditional funding routes.

Deal Two

Supporting education with a vital turnaround strategy

Rising pressure and policy changes across the private education sector created significant challenges for an independent school looking to adapt its model and tackle declining numbers. When others stepped away, we supported with a vital turnaround strategy designed to reposition the school and prepare the business for the future. In some situations, lending is not just about backing what a business is today, but where it is trying to get to.

Deal Three

Hunting pot facility unlocks cash for future property portfolio growth

A portfolio investor was targeting auction properties but needed access to capital quickly to move when opportunities appeared. Using an existing buy-to-let portfolio, we structured a hunting pot facility to release cash while preserving future flexibility. Where other lenders focused on individual assets, we focused on the bigger strategy. The result was a rapid turnaround, with further acquisitions lined up and a client who returned almost immediately with new opportunities.
